

PAST, PRESENT, FUTURE

Located in Singapore, the condominium design reflects the precious moment from the past, the needs of the present and some futuristic touches through its modern look, Ria Iskandar writes

PHOTOGRAPHY COURTESY OF ARTISTROOM
INTERIOR DESIGNER ARTISTROOM

“A fresh and modern interior that they wouldn’t tire of,” - Artistroom

(This Page)
The dining area reflects
modern style of design
(Opposite Page)
The dining area

When the clients decided to shift their bungalow into an apartment, they clearly gave their wishlist of design to the designer team, Artistroom. “They dreamt of a space that can contain all the years of memories from their old house, as well as areas and room spaces to entertain when they have friends and family over,” says Artistroom to Indonesia Tatler Homes. Strategically placed in one of the prestigious condominium building in Singapore, the Harbour View Towers, this unit owned by a couple with their children. But since all of their children were grown up, they wanted to move from their house to the apartment, where during the holidays their children can visit them and stay over with them.

Responding to the clients’ wants and needs, Singapore based interior designer team, Artistroom, creates the perfect design solution with modern approach. “A fresh and modern interior that they wouldn’t tire of,” says the designer team. Through this project, Artistroom has explored different strategies of creating storage into segments, yet at the same time feature a perfect space for entertain the guests. A modern yet natural materials created from the use of light timber wood and touches of beige and white colors combination. The floor area dominated by humongous square tiles that gave a larger sense of spaces. The wooden panel that composed perfectly on the ceiling area adds depth and texture, which encourages character to the room.

The natural interior concept also applied in the bedroom area features natural wooden ceramic tiles to complement the large wooden and white cabinetry. The earthy colours creating a clean yet modern look of the interior and gives the freedom for the owner to dress up their condominium with their personal accessories collection. Based on the client's wishlist to add some spaces for their personal collection from their previous house, the designer team provides the categorise storages almost in every spot in the condominium, such as the master bedroom; where a walk-in wardrobe, built-in dresses, TV area, bedframe and additional essential storages were all properly segregated to allow interactive spaces in between to access the clients' daily need.

The designer, Artistroom, always describes themselves as a design studio that varies very much in the interior environment. They do the design, develop and assist their clients during the entire process to ensure that functionality, design and construction to go cohesive together. Ensuring their clients to select the right space planning, colours, materials and interior fittings to create the right environment. Not only speaks for the client's wants but also their needs, which are the basic foundation for the designer team every time the working on a project, just like they done through this modern style condominium project.

(This Page)
The earthy colors creating modern yet clean look

(Opposite Page, clockwise from top)
The master bedroom; The designer team provides categorise storage almost in every spot of the condominium; The bathroom area dominated with natural materials, such as wood and stone

